“Have you ever wished you felt happier and more fulfilled?” The authors of this book take “readers on a journey through the struggles we all encounter regarding faith, love, and work.” There are stories, examples, and reflection questions for individuals or small groups.

Chapter 1 Getting to the Heart of the Matter

“Lord, you are God and I am not.”

Chapter 2: Where in the World Is Our God?

God is in our bad times, our good times, in the ordinary rhythms of our daily lives.

Chapter 3 How in the World Do We Relate?

Love, acceptance, and perhaps sacrifice. “It is easy to lovingly relate with those who love us. The challenge is to lovingly relate to those who hurt us.”

Chapter 4 What in the World Do We Do and Why Do We Do It?

Being spiritual is not about withdrawing from our workplace, our daily rhythms, but about partnering with God to bring a little more love and kindness into our workplace.

Chapter 5 How in the World Do We Make a Difference?

“The world is moved along not only by the mighty shoves of its heroes, but also by the aggregate of the tiny pushes of each honest worker.” Helen Keller

Reflection questions

1. How would a little more love and kindness affect those with whom you interact in your workplace?
2. What is one tiny push of love or kindness that you could give to your workplace?
3. Why are you working where you work and with those with whom you work?
4. How would your workplace attitude change if you accepted that God had chosen you to partner with him in your workplace at this time in your life?
